General Index

From: Vol. 1, No. 1—Fall | Winter 1974
To: Vol. 45, Nos. 1 & 2—Spring | Summer 2019

THE FIRST FORTY-FIVE YEARS

“For more than thirty years The Chesterton Review has held a place of honour among literary journals. It blazed a trail for the burgeoning Chesterton revival. Speaking personally, The Chesterton Review was one of the beacons that led me out of the darkness of my youth towards the Catholic Faith. For this alone I will always be grateful for its existence and grateful to Father Boyd for founding it.”

Joseph Pearce

“The Chesterton Review has kept on improving on its original high standard until it is now among the best literary journals in the world.”

Chesterton para la Fe & Cultura realizada en Roma [mayo 2015], de María Martínez López fue publicado en la edición del 16 de mayo, 2015 de Alfa & Omega. Un obispo vestido de payaso. Bajo este curioso lema, un congreso celebrado en Italia ha reflexionado sobre la teología de la risa en Chesterton y sus aplicaciones para la apologética y la evangelización en el tercer milenio. En palabras del experto Dermot Quinn, «Chesterton creía profundamente y demostró brillantemente que el ingenio y el humor están entre las más versátiles de esas armas evangélicas».)

*Chesterton y el juglar de Dios. (La siguiente nota de Luis Chitarroni fue publicada en Página 12 de Argentina el 6 de abril, 2014. Como Graham Greene y Evelyn Waugh, G.K. Chesterton perteneció a la estirpe de escritores ingleses que tuvieron una conversión al cristianismo en su vida adulta. Poco después de su primera comunión, escribió una biografía de San Francisco de Asís, aparecida originalmente en 1923, y que ahora publica Sudamericana (2015) en nuestro país. Aquí se reproduce el epílogo que escribió Luis Chitarroni para esta edición.)

El hombre que no fue jueves*. (Con su libro El hombre que no fue jueves, el escritor payanés Juan Esteban Constaín, ganó el Premio Narrativa.
