

SETON HALL UNIVERSITY
POSITIONING STATEMENTS FOR INDIVIDUAL SCHOOLS

The College of Arts and Sciences

The College of Arts and Sciences is for working professionals looking to advance within their careers in a compassionate, diverse and collaborative learning environment focused on academic and ethical development for nearly 500 graduate students. Students prepare for leadership positions in the sciences, humanities or professional studies. The graduate education they pursue is bolstered by a close proximity to New York City and by widely acclaimed, expert faculty who demonstrate how to integrate theories learned in the classroom with real-world experiences.

The College of Education and Human Services

For those interested in furthering their education or professional psychology careers, the College of Education and Human Services provides a unique, socially-conscious setting and nationally recognized, accredited campus-based, off-site, and online programs, taught by skilled practitioners, that enable students to succeed as teachers, administrators and psychology professionals.

The College of Nursing

For current and prospective nurses, the College of Nursing provides a wide variety of undergraduate and nationally ranked graduate programs that have prepared students for leadership in the nursing industry since 1937. Unlike its competitors, the College of Nursing is a pioneer in evidence-based practice, servant leadership and cutting-edge technology, and encourages its students to integrate their values into their daily nursing practice.

Immaculate Conception Seminary School of Theology

Immaculate Conception Seminary School of Theology is for seminarians who wish to be ordained to the priesthood through an esteemed, integrated priestly formation program that has been serving God's people for 150 years. It is also for students who want to prepare for ministries among the People of God in an environment where seminarians and lay students can study and share their perspectives alongside each other and where they are intimately connected to surrounding parish communities, while having access to all the academic and spiritual resources that a Catholic Diocesan university has to offer.

The School of Law

Seton Hall prepares its students for legal practice by combining doctrine with practical, hands-on applications. From day one, students collaborate with professors to effect social change through pro bono service, and to conduct research, draft publications and participate in conferences and symposia that shape the perspectives of policymakers, legislators and corporate leaders the world over. Centrally located in Newark, Seton Hall Law offers a high concentration of state and federal judiciary, governmental agencies and major law firms within walking distance and providing our students access to an array of internships and clerkships. These opportunities enable Seton Hall students to uncommon strong legal skills and professional networks that will benefit them throughout their careers.

The Stillman School of Business

For career driven professionals interested in pursuing a advanced degree while still advancing their careers, the Stillman School of Business is a nationally recognized, accredited, graduate program that offers community and personalized attention.

The School of Diplomacy and International Relations

The School of Diplomacy and International Relations prepares students from around the world to become leaders in a global society. Its innovative graduate and undergraduate programs provide students with the critical skills and knowledge needed for international careers in public service, business, law and the nonprofit sector. Through a unique alliance with the United Nations Association of the United States of America and the United Nations Foundation, students are exposed to today's leaders and policymakers while experiencing diplomacy at work.

Students come together from throughout the United States and nearly 20 countries to participate in a multidisciplinary curriculum that emphasizes global studies, multilateral diplomacy, conflict resolution, international economics and leadership. A distinguished faculty of scholars and professionals bring cutting-edge theory and practical perspectives to the classroom. With a growing network of alumni working in the field of international affairs, the School is strengthening international institutions by contributing well-prepared and talented diplomatic professionals.
